Information for Curriculum ReviewRationale for new course & consistency with departmental mission

With both domestic and international students in the athletic coaching minor, along with athletic coaching being a global profession, it is important to offer a course that looks at sports, coaching and culture internationally.

This is course will open the student's eyes and understanding of how athletic coaching and sports culture are connected. This course will also address the need for athletic coaches to consider the sports culture of an entity when applying or interviewing for a coaching position.

Also, this will give students, in the Athletic Coaching minor, options on what elective courses they want to take instead of giving them no choices at all. I have polled students for the last several years, about a course like this, and I received positive feedback.

Please list all student learning outcomes for this course

By the end of the course, students should be able to:

-Criticize and defend sport cultural issues between domestic and global sports as they pertain to the topics of corruption, economics, gender, politics, race, and religion.

-Compare sport cultural similarities between Rugby and Soccer in the United States.

-Differentiate between Rugby and Soccer, as it pertains to, the historical global sport culture issue of race.
